

IT in Italy

Matěj Kokorský, Patrik Horák, Kryštof Pohl, Michal Nevažil, Marek Helis

7.V

Differences

ČR

ITALY

Pc

Tablets

No big white board like in cinema (in school)

Before telephone number +420
+39

V

S

Big white board like in cinema (in

Before

Informatics

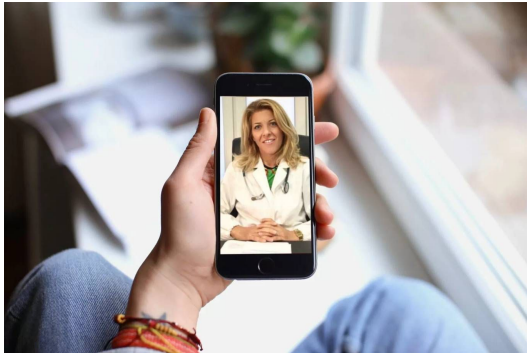

- They can't use phones in school.
- They don't have PC in their IT classroom.
- They have one room with big interactive whiteboard.
- Italy disallowed Artificial Intelligence/ChatGPT
- Most of italian students has PlayStation.

Applications

- They normally use social networks like Instagram, YouTube, TikTok
- For texting a friends they using whatsapp
- Many of them have pc at their home
- MedInAction is an app where you can find an English speaking doctor

To make the bread easy to eat.

The Romans came up with several improvements, like adding cheese and meat. They also made a thin crust cooked in a wood-burning oven.

Ten centuries later, tomato sauce was finally added to the bread. The tomato first arrived in Europe in the 1530s, but it was rarely used. Many thought it was poisonous.

The people of Naples, Italy were perhaps the first to cook with this round, red fruit. By the 1750s, hot bread with tomato sauce was an essential part of the diet in Naples. By the 1790s, the streets in everybody wanted to eat the local dish. In 1830, the first pizza restaurant opened. That restaurant is still open today.

In 1859, pizza became popular in Italy. That's when the King and Queen visited Naples. The queen loved pizza with red sauce, white cheese and green herbs, the same colours as the Italian flag. After the visit, Italy experienced a pizza craze.

The rest of the world didn't experience pizza until after the 1950s. Following World War 2, millions of Italians moved abroad. When they moved, they brought their food culture with them.

Pizza shops popped up everywhere. People around the world fell in love with pizza, a food that was started in ancient times, improved by the Greeks and Romans, and perfected in Naples.

